

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation and today's Republican self serving corruption of the media.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by Federal law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the special interests, the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard.

It appears that the FCC today serves the Republican Party first, and no one next.

Thank you.
